

ENHANCEMENTS TO ALEXANDER FORBES INVESTMENTS

Gyongyi King Chief Investment Officer

Gyongyi King first joined Alexander Forbes Investments (previously Investment Solutions) as deputy chief investment officer, leading the investment research team. She now steps in to the role as Chief Investment Officer.

Gyongyi was previously Chief Investment Officer of Caveo, one of the largest and most successful fund-of-hedge fund businesses in South Africa, largely due to the investment leadership provided by her. She has over 18 years' investment experience, with a focus on multi-management in the alternative investment arena.

Gyongyi spent seven years at Henderson Global Investors, a UK asset manager, as a hedge fund manager research analyst. She then joined Switzerland-based EFG Private Bank, working for five years as a member of the investment team with responsibility for the alternative manager selection team and the alternative investment multi-manager portfolios. In 2009, she moved from the UK to South Africa and was appointed Chief Investment Officer of Caveo in April that year.

Academic qualifications:
BSc (Hons), CFA charter holder

Mark Lindhiem Head of Strategy, Alexander Forbes Investments

As Head of Strategy for Alexander Forbes Investments, Mark is responsible for leading a number of growth initiatives for the business. He first joined Alexander Forbes Investments in 2006 and held previous roles as Head of Platform Services and Chief Investment Officer. He led the investment team for two years before deciding to pursue his other interests in business. He has experience as an employee benefits consultant, and first entered the institutional investment industry in 1998, when he joined Alexander Forbes Asset Consultants.

Previous roles at Alexander Forbes Investments include South Africa chief investment officer and head of asset manager research.

Lesiba Mothata Executive Chief Economist

Lesiba Mothata joined Alexander Forbes Investments (previously Investment Solutions) in 2013 as Head of Market and Economic Research after a two-year spell at the South African Reserve Bank as a risk specialist responsible for the strategic asset allocation of the foreign-exchange reserve portfolio (about $50 billion).

His input was in modelling risk scenarios and providing top-down views on currencies, countries (including emerging markets), fixed-income assets and riskier asset classes "new" to central banks such as mortgage-backed securities, corporate bonds and equities.

Before that, Lesiba spent most of his five years at Investec Bank in the private wealth business as a global macroeconomist, providing input into G7 and emerging-market economic trends, global currencies, sovereign bonds and commodities. He was an integral member of the tactical and strategic asset allocation committee, where he modelled risk premium assumptions. Before working for Investec Bank, Lesiba was at the Nedbank Treasury for about two and a half years as a currency trader and resident economist for the global spot-trading desk.

Lesiba joins the Alexander Forbes Investments exco in 2017 where he provides context on the market and economic conditions, especially relating to South Africa and emerging markets.
